Three times you can skip travel insurance—and three times you should buy it

Travel insurance can offer peace of mind while you're on a trip—but at a price. Here's some advice for US travelers planning their next vacations.

Skip It: For US travel

Road-tripping around the American Southwest? You can probably skip any extra insurance. Travel within the US is typically a less expensive investment — and most people tend to plan only a few weeks in advance. The average domestic trip spans about four days and costs $576 per person.

Plus, if you have medical insurance, you're typically covered for any emergencies that occur. As always, double check the fine print, but experts generally recommend opting out of trip insurance for short trips within the US.

Skip It: For flights

If your flight is canceled, you're generally entitled to have the next available seat on the next available flight going to your destination. Having insurance is not going to make much difference in getting you re-booked faster.

Skip It: Just for flexibility

Trip insurance should not be used just so you can keep your options open. Instead of purchasing a whole comprehensive policy, opt for a hotel reservation with free cancelation right up until your stay.

Buy It: For international trips

International trips last about 12 days on average and cost $3,242 per person. Travelers also tend to book trips outside the US much further in advance — and for good reason. To get a good deal on an international flight, you'll need to book almost five months beforehand on average.

Because of the advanced planning and the cost, you should definitely consider buying insurance that will cover you in a wide range of situations.

Buy It: For medical reasons

If something goes wrong in a faraway place, medical help may be difficult to come by, and it could be expensive, too. That's when a comprehensive travel insurance policy can come in handy: It can help you avoid out-of-pocket expenses.

Buy It: For cruises

Cruises involve a big, upfront payment, international travel and higher risk of problems. We'd recommend investing in a comprehensive policy which covers all types of situations, including hurricanes. It's a good way of protecting your investment so you're not on the hook for exorbitant fees.
